For everyone saying that this rule is not gender biased in the way it has been enforced, here is a picture of the tank top I just completed a 2 hour workout in with no trouble from RWC staff. The only difference between this tank and a stringer is the built in sports-bra. This picture will also be sent to Maria Beckman in order to help her investigation.

One day your grandson is going to want to know what kind of man his grandfather was.

Hey boys look what I can wear to the UCF gym. Sex discrimination sucks right? Like when you want to be topless at the beach but can't because oh wait, YOU can.

 Sean Reilly I think we want equality on both ends. Tanks in the gym and topless beaches.

Employees clearly wearing BAGGY cutoff shirts even though that is against the claim that “What if that person is using the dumbbells and they’re working too...working out too close to somebody that’s bench pressing and the end of the weight... uh... the end of the... uh... dumbbell hits the shirt – catches the shirt and somehow the weight... that leads to some risk management situation. That’s EXACTLY why the policy is in place.” (Scott Mauro, marketing and communications)
